Frequently used terms

Listed below are definitions of several of ExxonMobil's key business and financial performance measures and other terms. These definitions are provided to facilitate understanding of the terms and their calculation. In the case of financial measures that we believe constitute "non-GAAP financial measures" under Securities and Exchange Commission Regulation G, we provide a reconciliation to the most comparable Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) measure and other information required by that rule.

Capital and exploration expenditures (Capex)

Represents the combined total of additions in cost to property, plant and equipment, and exploration expenses on a before-tax basis from the Consolidated statement of income. ExxonMobil Capex includes its share of similar costs for equity companies. Capex excludes assets acquired in non-monetary exchanges, the value of intangible items such as acquired assets, and depreciation on the cost of exploration support equipment and facilities recorded to property, plant and equipment when acquired. While ExxonMobil's management is responsible for all measurements and elements of all costs, particular focus is placed on managing the controllable aspects of the group of expenditures.

Cash operating costs and cash operating expenses (cash Opex, structural efficiencies, or structural reductions)

Cash operating costs consist of (1) Production and manufacturing expenses, (2) selling, general and administrative expenses, and (3) Exploration expenses, including its share from ExxonMobil's Consolidated statement of income. The sums of these income statement lines serve as an indicator of cash operating costs and do not reflect the total cash operating costs of the Corporation. Cash operating expenses are a proxy for the measure that includes equity company cash expenses and which are directed internally to support management's oversight of spending over time. This measure is useful for investors to understand the Corporation's efforts to optimize cash through designed capital management. For information concerning the calculation and reconciliation of cash operating expense see the Frequently Used Terms available on the Investors page of our website at www.exxonmobil.com under the heading News & Resources.

Returns, rate of return, IRR

Unless referring specifically to internal rates, references to returns, rate of return, IRR, and similar terms mean future discounted cash flow returns on future capital investments based on current company estimates. Investment returns include gross exploration and acquisition costs.

Heavy oil and oil sands

Heavy oil, for the purpose of this report, includes heavy oil, extra heavy oil, and bitumen, as defined by the World Petroleum Congress in 1987 based on American Petroleum Institute (API) gravity and viscosity at reservoir conditions. Heavy oil has an API gravity between 10 and 22.3 degrees. The API gravity of extra heavy oil and bitumen is less than 10 degrees. Extra heavy oil has a viscosity less than 10,000 centipoise, whereas the viscosity of bitumen is greater than 10,000 centipoise. The term "oil sands" is used to indicate heavy oil (generally bitumen) that is recovered in a mining operation.

Project

The term "project" can refer to a variety of different activities and does not necessarily have the same meaning as it may government payment transparency reports.

Resources, resource base, and recoverable resources

Along with similar terms used in this report, these refer to the total remaining estimated quantities of oil and natural gas that are expected to be ultimately recoverable. ExxonMobil refers to these resources and quantities of discovered resources as resource additions. The resource base includes quantities of oil and natural gas classified as proved reserves, as well as quantities that are not yet classified as proved reserves, but that are expected to be ultimately recoverable. The term "resource base" or similar terms are not intended to correspond to SEC definitions such as "provable" or "proven" reserves. The term "in place" refers to those quantities of oil and natural gas estimated to be contained in known accumulations and includes recoverable and non-recoverable amounts.
